

danger to be faced. The restoration of nationalism would bring, in the long run, everything back to the starting-point of renewed preparation for war.

First essential problem to be solved. Without it, all progress illusory, final abolition of the division of Europe into national sovereign states. This is the only possible solution of the innumerable frontier and other problems poisoning Europe. The disappearance of the monarchical dynasties, which kept up the nationalist illusion, is a step in this direction.

Everything must be done from now on with action and propoganda to connect up the different European revolutionary movements and lay the foundations of a future federal organization.
